The cards emerged in the above position with the top card being the mind node card. Then the cards were numbered first right, and then left. This patterning is born from instinct.

The following is an in-depth explanation of each card and how empathically it applies to your current state of existence emotionally, physically and mentally. It is best to take this reading with a critical thinking perspective and not an emotional perspective.

As you understand the reading, you will break through your 7th veil and into a clearer picture of your current way forward.

The Mind Node – The Central System

Hylonome was a female centaur in Greek mythology. While she was present at a battle, she lost her husband, whom she loved very much. Heartbroken, she took her own life to join him.

In life, we lose people, and it feels sometimes like an actual death. You experienced this, a loss that has left you feeling in a spiritual death. This loss has caused you to miss many precious hours, moments, and days, sitting inside of the pain, wrapping it around your shoulders like a blanket of self-blame.

You must learn to take beautiful moments with you on life's journey and allow what does not serve your healing and way forward, to drift slowly away.

Hylonome is reversed. She has been pulling for release from your strand for a very long time because you are in control of that end of the connection by holding onto it. Until you choose to cut the strand, pull the root, and release the pain, she will linger and hover like a dark cloud over you.

This inability to let go of what you lost has consumed your mind. Even when you are not thinking about it, you are thinking about it. It is time to let it go. It is time to accept that you had no control over the gain or loss. It was an experience, and as with all life experiences, the most positive thing we humans can do, is take from them the lessons and grow. This is a message to release.
